Good afternoon all

Thank you for the input on this issue.

At this current moment there have been 10 cars parked on the road. They all have single men sitting in the cars, no one has gone on the trails. I walked through the area and was not comfortable taking a photo from a close vicinity.

We have concerns for the safety of our employees. We are a 24/7 operation. At night there are a dozen people in the building and the day varies. Our employees would love to use the trails, as we have a fitness walking challenge weekly. Almost none walk the path. They all chose to walk the roadway instead.

It would be great to have some kind of a resolution that we feel safe and more people get to enjoy the trail.

I feel that moving the barriers would help the men who just sit in their cars. I've never seen a woman sitting alone, although it's possible that occurs as well.

I would be happy to provide a count of the complaints I have received for this matter if you need it.

Anything that I can do to help this process please let me know. I hope to use the path someday as well.

Thank you

Please check out this issue on Portland's SeeClickFix page. (Link below) I report this on a regular basis because I'm the trail steward for the Portland Trails section from Hutchins Drive to Blueberry Road as well as another trail. Every time I go (at least once a week) I encounter the problem of single men parked in cars (running cars if it's cold outside) at the end of Hutchins Drive. They're either there for sex or drugs, not to walk the trail! This situation is so hugely inappropriate for a Portland Trails trailhead! I've seen them in the woods, seemingly going/coming in "separate" directions. I've had them avoid me by walking off-trail through the underbrush so they wouldn't have to come close to me.

It's intimidating for a single person, especially a woman (I have my dog with me so I'm not so intimidated) walking the trail alone. It's not a desirable situation at a trailhead where families want to take their kids to walk a trail! On top of that, they throw trash and cigarette butts out of their cars and make a mess of the area. I report the "loitering men in cars" and the trash on a regular basis to SeeClickFix. Via the site and by phone I've asked PPD to monitor the site several times a day. It's still a problem, and has been going on for years. A patrol car cruising the road and ticketing/removing the men sitting in their cars might help. An unmarked car(s) with a non-uniformed officer, could sit there and observe the problem, then issue tickets or tell the men to leave. "No Loitering" signs are posted there.

I know that Portland Trails is working with some arm of the City of Portland to address the situation, which I realize is a difficult one to address, but I want to be sure that City Council is aware of the situation.

A picture of the trash is attached as well as on the issue report site. You'll be a much better view of the mess that's being made if you look at the attached picture.

Good Morning,

I was inquiring about the barriers at the end of Hutchins Drive In the winter they are moved down to the end of the road, and now they have been moved up quite a bit, which has been awful for our business for 2 reasons

- 1 We use 2-3 parking spots for our employees on the road We also get mulch delivered a few times a week and it has been nearly impossible for the 18 wheeler to turn around with the cars parked right outside our entrance
- 2 We all know what happens down at the end of the road; 90% of the people going to the trail are there for reasons other than the trail On Friday alone I saw a male pulling his pants up & a separate male in the woods directly across from my office with his pants around his ankles I liked the barriers down the street as then it wasn't outside of my window I am often alone in the building & it makes me very uncomfortable

I do understand that there was a sexual assault a few years ago down there and that is why the barriers were moved, but the same stuff is happening, just closer to our businesses

Lots of people from Maine Med (102 Hutchins) walk and have to avoid this area now too

I realize that all police forces are shorthanded, and I thank them for their service; however, it is very rare we see one at the end of this road

Please consider moving the barriers back to the end of the road

Feel free to call my cell

Thank you,

Please check out this issue on Portland's SeeClickFix page. (Link below) I report this on a regular basis because I'm the trail steward for the Portland Trails section from Hutchins Drive to Blueberry Road as well as another trail. Every time I go (at least once a week) I encounter the problem of single men parked in cars (running cars if it's cold outside) at the end of Hutchins Drive. They're either there for sex or drugs, not to walk the trail! This situation is so hugely inappropriate for a Portland Trails trailhead! I've seen them in the woods, seemingly going/coming in "separate" directions. I've had them avoid me by walking off-trail through the underbrush so they wouldn't have to come close to me.

It's intimidating for a single person, especially a woman (I have my dog with me so I'm not so intimidated) walking the trail alone. It's not a desirable situation at a trailhead where families want to take their kids to walk a trail! On top of that, they throw trash and cigarette butts out of their cars and make a mess of the area. I report the "loitering men in cars" and the trash on a regular basis to SeeClickFix. Via the site and by phone I've asked PPD to monitor the site several times a day. It's still a problem, and has been going on for years. A patrol car cruising the road and ticketing/removing the men sitting in their cars might help. An unmarked car(s) with a non-uniformed officer, could sit there and observe the problem, then issue tickets or tell the men to leave. "No Loitering" signs are posted there.

I know that Portland Trails is working with some arm of the City of Portland to address the situation, which I realize is a difficult one to address, but I want to be sure that City Council is aware of the situation.

A picture of the trash is attached as well as on the issue report site. You'll be a much better view of the mess that's being made if you look at the attached picture.

Good Morning,

I was inquiring about the barriers at the end of Hutchins Drive. In the winter they are moved down to the end of the road, and now they have been moved up quite a bit, which has been awful for our business for 2 reasons

- 1 We use 2-3 parking spots for our employees on the road. We also get mulch delivered a few times a week and it has been nearly impossible for the 18 wheeler to turn around with the cars parked right outside our entrance
- 2 We all know what happens down at the end of the road; 90 % of the people going to the trail are there for reasons other than the trail. On Friday alone I saw a male pulling his pants up & a separate male in the woods directly across from my office with his pants around his ankles. I liked the barriers down the street as then it wasn't outside of my window. I am often alone in the building & it makes me very uncomfortable.

I do understand that there was a sexual assault a few years ago down there and that is why the barriers were moved, but the same stuff is happening, just closer to our businesses.

Lots of people from Maine Med (102 Hutchins) walk and have to avoid this area now too.

I realize that all police forces are shorthanded, and I thank them for their service; however, it is very rare we see one at the end of this road.

Please consider moving the barriers back to the end of the road.

Feel free to call my cell.

Thank you,

Hi Andrew,
Chief Gorham let me know you will be looking into this. Here is some of the correspondence and photos.

One proposed solution is to put barricades in to close off the end of this road that is being used for illegal activities, etc...

Staff are open to this concept, but need input from emergency services.

See diagram below from [REDACTED] of Portland Trails. (copied on this email)

Good afternoon all

Thank you for the input on this issue.

At this current moment there have been 10 cars parked on the road. They all have single men sitting in the cars, no one has gone on the trails. I walked through the area and was not comfortable taking a photo from a close vicinity.

We have concerns for the safety of our employees. We are a 24/7 operation. At night there are a dozen people in the building and the day varies. Our employees would love to use the trails, as we have a fitness walking challenge weekly. Almost none walk the path. They all chose to walk the roadway instead.

It would be great to have some kind of a resolution that we feel safe and more people get to enjoy the trail.

I feel that moving the barriers would help the men who just sit in their cars. I've never seen a woman sitting alone, although it's possible that occurs as well.

I would be happy to provide a count of the complaints I have received for this matter if you need it.

Anything that I can do to help this process please let me know. I hope to use the path someday as well.

Thank you

As you all know this has been an ongoing issue for years. I believe the last time it came up I had proposed moving the concrete barriers way up the road, so that cars aren't able to be parked near the trail, and would be far more visible. (see sketch).

Portland Trails will work on having more of a presence down there. We do have some funding and plans to improve the Stroudwater Trail this year, including this location. We hope to make it feel more like a public space/trailhead than a forgotten dead-end. But regardless, I continue to think moving the vehicle access point will be the most effective at reducing this behavior.

Good afternoon all

Thank you for the input on this issue.

At this current moment there have been 10 cars parked on the road. They all have single men sitting in the cars, no one has gone on the trails. I walked through the area and was not comfortable taking a photo from a close vicinity.

We have concerns for the safety of our employees. We are a 24/7 operation. At night there are a dozen people in the building and the day varies. Our employees would love to use the trails, as we have a fitness walking challenge weekly. Almost none walk the path. They all chose to walk the roadway instead.

It would be great to have some kind of a resolution that we feel safe and more people get to enjoy the trail.

I feel that moving the barriers would help the men who just sit in their cars. I've never seen a woman sitting alone, although it's possible that occurs as well.

I would be happy to provide a count of the complaints I have received for this matter if you need it.

Anything that I can do to help this process please let me know. I hope to use the path someday as well.

Thank you

Please check out this issue on Portland's SeeClickFix page. (Link below) I report this on a regular basis because I'm the trail steward for the Portland Trails section from Hutchins Drive to Blueberry Road as well as another trail. Every time I go (at least once a week) I encounter the problem of single men parked in cars (running cars if it's cold outside) at the end of Hutchins Drive. They're either there for sex or drugs, not to walk the trail! This situation is so hugely inappropriate for a Portland Trails trailhead! I've seen them in the woods, seemingly going/coming in "separate" directions. I've had them avoid me by walking off-trail through the underbrush so they wouldn't have to come close to me.

It's intimidating for a single person, especially a woman (I have my dog with me so I'm not so intimidated) walking the trail alone. It's not a desirable situation at a trailhead where families want to take their kids to walk a trail! On top of that, they throw trash and cigarette butts out of their cars and make a mess of the area. I report the "loitering men in cars" and the trash on a regular basis to SeeClickFix. Via the site and by phone I've asked PPD to monitor the site several times a day. It's still a problem, and has been going on for years. A patrol car cruising the road and ticketing/removing the men sitting in their cars might help. An unmarked car(s) with a non-uniformed officer, could sit there and observe the problem, then issue tickets or tell the men to leave. "No Loitering" signs are posted there.

I know that Portland Trails is working with some arm of the City of Portland to address the situation, which I realize is a difficult one to address, but I want to be sure that City Council is aware of the situation.

A picture of the trash is attached as well as on the issue report site. You'll be a much better view of the mess that's being made if you look at the attached picture.

Good Morning,

I was inquiring about the barriers at the end of Hutchins Drive. In the winter they are moved down to the end of the road, and now they have been moved up quite a bit, which has been awful for our business for 2 reasons

1. We use 2-3 parking spots for our employees on the road. We also get mulch delivered a few times a week and it has been nearly impossible for the 18 wheeler to turn around with the cars parked right outside our entrance.
2. We all know what happens down at the end of the road; 90% of the people going to the trail are there for reasons other than the trail. On Friday alone I saw a male pulling his pants up & a separate male in the woods directly across from my office with his pants around his ankles. I liked the barriers down the street as then it wasn't outside of my window. I am often alone in the building & it makes me very uncomfortable.

I do understand that there was a sexual assault a few years ago down there and that is why the barriers were moved, but the same stuff is happening, just closer to our businesses.

Lots of people from Maine Med (102 Hutchins) walk and have to avoid this area now too.

I realize that all police forces are shorthanded, and I thank them for their service; however, it is very rare we see one at the end of this road.

Please consider moving the barriers back to the end of the road.

Feel free to call my cell.

Thank you,

Good Morning,

I was inquiring about the barriers at the end of Hutchins Drive. In the winter they are moved down to the end of the road, and now they have been moved up quite a bit, which has been awful for our business for 2 reasons

- 1 We use 2-3 parking spots for our employees on the road. We also get mulch delivered a few times a week and it has been nearly impossible for the 18 wheeler to turn around with the cars parked right outside our entrance
- 2 We all know what happens down at the end of the road; 90 % of the people going to the trail are there for reasons other than the trail. On Friday alone I saw a male pulling his pants up & a separate male in the woods directly across from my office with his pants around his ankles. I liked the barriers down the street as then it wasn't outside of my window. I am often alone in the building & it makes me very uncomfortable.

I do understand that there was a sexual assault a few years ago down there and that is why the barriers were moved, but the same stuff is happening, just closer to our businesses.

Lots of people from Maine Med (102 Hutchins) walk and have to avoid this area now too.

I realize that all police forces are shorthanded, and I thank them for their service; however, it is very rare we see one at the end of this road.

Please consider moving the barriers back to the end of the road.

Feel free to call my cell.

Thank you,

Chief Gorham let me know you will be looking into this. Here is some of the correspondence and photos.

One proposed solution is to put barricades in to close off the end of this road that is being used for illegal activities, etc...

Staff are open to this concept, but need input from emergency services.

Good afternoon all

Thank you for the input on this issue.

At this current moment there have been 10 cars parked on the road. They all have single men sitting in the cars, no one has gone on the trails. I walked through the area and was not comfortable taking a photo from a close vicinity.

We have concerns for the safety of our employees. We are a 24/7 operation. At night there are a dozen people in the building and the day varies. Our employees would love to use the trails, as we have a fitness walking challenge weekly. Almost none walk the path. They all chose to walk the roadway instead.

It would be great to have some kind of a resolution that we feel safe and more people get to enjoy the trail.

I feel that moving the barriers would help the men who just sit in their cars. I've never seen a woman sitting alone, although it's possible that occurs as well.

I would be happy to provide a count of the complaints I have received for this matter if you need it.

Anything that I can do to help this process please let me know. I hope to use the path someday as well.

Thank you

As you all know this has been an ongoing issue for years. I believe the last time it came up I had proposed moving the concrete barriers way up the road, so that cars aren't able to be parked near the trail, and would be far more visible. (see sketch).

Portland Trails will work on having more of a presence down there. We do have some funding and plans to improve the Stroudwater Trail this year, including this location. We hope to make it feel more like a public space/trailhead than a forgotten dead-end. But regardless, I continue to think moving the vehicle access point will be the most effective at reducing this behavior.

Please check out this issue on Portland's SeeClickFix page. (Link below) I report this on a regular basis because I'm the trail steward for the Portland Trails section from Hutchins Drive to Blueberry Road as well as another trail. Every time I go (at least once a week) I encounter the problem of single men parked in cars (running cars if it's cold outside) at the end of Hutchins Drive. They're either there for sex or drugs, not to walk the trail! This situation is so hugely inappropriate for a Portland Trails trailhead! I've seen them in the woods, seemingly going/coming in "separate" directions. I've had them avoid me by walking off-trail through the underbrush so they wouldn't have to come close to me.

It's intimidating for a single person, especially a woman (I have my dog with me so I'm not so intimidated) walking the trail alone. It's not a desirable situation at a trailhead where families want to take their kids to walk a trail! On top of that, they throw trash and cigarette butts out of their cars and make a mess of the area. I report the "loitering men in cars" and the trash on a regular basis to SeeClickFix. Via the site and by phone I've asked PPD to monitor the site several times a day. It's still a problem, and has been going on for years. A patrol car cruising the road and ticketing/removing the men sitting in their cars might help. An unmarked car(s) with a non-uniformed officer, could sit there and observe the problem, then issue tickets or tell the men to leave. "No Loitering" signs are posted there.

I know that Portland Trails is working with some arm of the City of Portland to address the situation, which I realize is a difficult one to address, but I want to be sure that City Council is aware of the situation.

A picture of the trash is attached as well as on the issue report site. You'll be a much better view of the mess that's being made if you look at the attached picture.

Good Morning,

I was inquiring about the barriers at the end of Hutchins Drive. In the winter they are moved down to the end of the road, and now they have been moved up quite a bit, which has been awful for our business for 2 reasons:

1. We use 2-3 parking spots for our employees on the road. We also get mulch delivered a few times a week and it has been nearly impossible for the 18 wheeler to turn around with the cars parked right outside our entrance.
2. We all know what happens down at the end of the road; 90% of the people going to the trail are there for reasons other than the trail. On Friday alone I saw a male pulling his pants up & a separate male in the woods directly across from my office with his pants around his ankles. I liked the barriers down the street as then it wasn't outside of my window. I am often alone in the building & it makes me very uncomfortable.

I do understand that there was a sexual assault a few years ago down there and that is why the barriers were moved, but the same stuff is happening, just closer to our businesses.

Lots of people from Maine Med (102 Hutchins) walk and have to avoid this area now too.

I realize that all police forces are shorthanded, and I thank them for their service; however, it is very rare we see one at the end of this road.

Please consider moving the barriers back to the end of the road.

Feel free to call my cell.

Thank you,

Hi Andrew,
Chief Gorham let me know you will be looking into this. Here is some of the correspondence and photos.

One proposed solution is to put barricades in to close off the end of this road that is being used for illegal activities, etc...

Staff are open to this concept, but need input from emergency services.

Good afternoon all

Thank you for the input on this issue.

At this current moment there have been 10 cars parked on the road. They all have single men sitting in the cars, no one has gone on the trails. I walked through the area and was not comfortable taking a photo from a close vicinity.

We have concerns for the safety of our employees. We are a 24/7 operation. At night there are a dozen people in the building and the day varies. Our employees would love to use the trails, as we have a fitness walking challenge weekly. Almost none walk the path. They all chose to walk the roadway instead.

It would be great to have some kind of a resolution that we feel safe and more people get to enjoy the trail.

I feel that moving the barriers would help the men who just sit in their cars. I've never seen a woman sitting alone, although it's possible that occurs as well.

I would be happy to provide a count of the complaints I have received for this matter if you need it.

Anything that I can do to help this process please let me know. I hope to use the path someday as well.

Thank you

As you all know this has been an ongoing issue for years. I believe the last time it came up I had proposed moving the concrete barriers way up the road, so that cars aren't able to be parked near the trail, and would be far more visible. (see sketch).

Portland Trails will work on having more of a presence down there. We do have some funding and plans to improve the Stroudwater Trail this year, including this location. We hope to make it feel more like a public space/trailhead than a forgotten dead-end. But regardless, I continue to think moving the vehicle access point will be the most effective at reducing this behavior.

Please check out this issue on Portland's SeeClickFix page. (Link below) I report this on a regular basis because I'm the trail steward for the Portland Trails section from Hutchins Drive to Blueberry Road as well as another trail. Every time I go (at least once a week) I encounter the problem of single men parked in cars (running cars if it's cold outside) at the end of Hutchins Drive. They're either there for sex or drugs, not to walk the trail! This situation is so hugely inappropriate for a Portland Trails trailhead! I've seen them in the woods, seemingly going/coming in "separate" directions. I've had them avoid me by walking off-trail through the underbrush so they wouldn't have to come close to me.

It's intimidating for a single person, especially a woman (I have my dog with me so I'm not so intimidated) walking the trail alone. It's not a desirable situation at a trailhead where families want to take their kids to walk a trail! On top of that, they throw trash and cigarette butts out of their cars and make a mess of the area. I report the "loitering men in cars" and the trash on a regular basis to SeeClickFix. Via the site and by phone I've asked PPD to monitor the site several times a day. It's still a problem, and has been going on for years. A patrol car cruising the road and ticketing/removing the men sitting in their cars might help. An unmarked car(s) with a non-uniformed officer, could sit there and observe the problem, then issue tickets or tell the men to leave. "No Loitering" signs are posted there.

I know that Portland Trails is working with some arm of the City of Portland to address the situation, which I realize is a difficult one to address, but I want to be sure that City Council is aware of the situation.

A picture of the trash is attached as well as on the issue report site. You'll be a much better view of the mess that's being made if you look at the attached picture.

I was inquiring about the barriers at the end of Hutchins Drive. In the winter they are moved down to the end of the road, and now they have been moved up quite a bit, which has been awful for our business for 2 reasons.

1. We use 2-3 parking spots for our employees on the road. We also get mulch delivered a few times a week and it has been nearly impossible for the 18 wheeler to turn around with the cars parked right outside our entrance.
2. We all know what happens down at the end of the road; 90 % of the people going to the trail are there for reasons other than the trail. On Friday alone I saw a male pulling his pants up & a separate male in the woods directly across from my office with his pants around his ankles. I liked the barriers down the street as then it wasn't outside of my window. I am often alone in the building & it makes me very uncomfortable.

I do understand that there was a sexual assault a few years ago down there and that is why the barriers were moved, but the same stuff is happening, just closer to our businesses.

Lots of people from Maine Med (102 Hutchins) walk and have to avoid this area now too.

I realize that all police forces are shorthanded, and I thank them for their service; however, it is very rare we see one at the end of this road.

Please consider moving the barriers back to the end of the road.

Feel free to call my cell.

Thank you,

Hi Andrew,

Chief Gorham let me know you will be looking into this. Here is some of the correspondence and photos.

One proposed solution is to put barricades in to close off the end of this road that is being used for illegal activities, etc...

Staff are open to this concept, but need input from emergency services.

See diagram below from [REDACTED] of Portland Trails. (copied on this email)

Good afternoon all

Thank you for the input on this issue.

At this current moment there have been 10 cars parked on the road. They all have single men sitting in the cars, no one has gone on the trails. I walked through the area and was not comfortable taking a photo from a close vicinity.

We have concerns for the safety of our employees. We are a 24/7 operation. At night there are a dozen people in the building and the day varies. Our employees would love to use the trails, as we have a fitness walking challenge weekly. Almost none walk the path. They all chose to walk the roadway instead.

It would be great to have some kind of a resolution that we feel safe and more people get to enjoy the trail.

I feel that moving the barriers would help the men who just sit in their cars. I've never seen a woman sitting alone, although it's possible that occurs as well.

I would be happy to provide a count of the complaints I have received for this matter if you need it.
Anything that I can do to help this process please let me know. I hope to use the path someday as well.

Thank you

As you all know this has been an ongoing issue for years. I believe the last time it came up I had proposed moving the concrete barriers way up the road, so that cars aren't able to be parked near the trail, and would be far more visible. (see sketch).

Portland Trails will work on having more of a presence down there. We do have some funding and plans to improve the Stroudwater Trail this year, including this location. We hope to make it feel more like a public space/trailhead than a forgotten dead-end. But regardless, I continue to think moving the vehicle access point will be the most effective at reducing this behavior.

Please check out this issue on Portland's SeeClickFix page. (Link below) I report this on a regular basis because I'm the trail steward for the Portland Trails section from Hutchins Drive to Blueberry Road as well as another trail. Every time I go (at least once a week) I encounter the problem of single men parked in cars (running cars if it's cold outside) at the end of Hutchins Drive. They're either there for sex or drugs, not to walk the trail! This situation is so hugely inappropriate for a Portland Trails trailhead! I've seen them in the woods, seemingly going/coming in "separate" directions. I've had them avoid me by walking off-trail through the underbrush so they wouldn't have to come close to me.

It's intimidating for a single person, especially a woman (I have my dog with me so I'm not so intimidated) walking the trail alone. It's not a desirable situation at a trailhead where families want to take their kids to walk a trail! On top of that, they throw trash and cigarette butts out of their cars and make a mess of the area. I report the "loitering men in cars" and the trash on a regular basis to SeeClickFix. Via the site and by phone I've asked PPD to monitor the site several times a day. It's still a problem, and has been going on for years. A patrol car cruising the road and ticketing/removing the men sitting in their cars might help. An unmarked car(s) with a non-uniformed officer, could sit there and observe the problem, then issue tickets or tell the men to leave. "No Loitering" signs are posted there.

I know that Portland Trails is working with some arm of the City of Portland to address the situation, which I realize is a difficult one to address, but I want to be sure that City Council is aware of the situation.

A picture of the trash is attached as well as on the issue report site. You'll be a much better view of the mess that's being made if you look at the attached picture.

Good afternoon all

Thank you for the input on this issue.

At this current moment there have been 10 cars parked on the road. They all have single men sitting in the cars, no one has gone on the trails. I walked through the area and was not comfortable taking a photo from a close vicinity.

We have concerns for the safety of our employees. We are a 24/7 operation. At night there are a dozen people in the building and the day varies. Our employees would love to use the trails, as we have a fitness walking challenge weekly. Almost none walk the path. They all chose to walk the roadway instead.

It would be great to have some kind of a resolution that we feel safe and more people get to enjoy the trail.

I feel that moving the barriers would help the men who just sit in their cars. I've never seen a woman sitting alone, although it's possible that occurs as well.

I would be happy to provide a count of the complaints I have received for this matter if you need it.

Anything that I can do to help this process please let me know. I hope to use the path someday as well.

Thank you

Thanks Marc,

Does that mean you will pull the barriers back?

I just got yet another call about this - this time from the Maine Med/Spring Harbor Facilities Director down there who really liked the idea of closing that area off to cars.

Portland Trails can do it as well, just let us know.

Thanks all,

This helped last time or just the turn around area.

Will work on removing the litter next week when time allows

Thanks for forwarding this Ethan.

As you all know this has been an ongoing issue for years. I believe the last time it came up I had proposed moving the concrete barriers way up the road, so that cars aren't able to be parked near the trail, and would be far more visible. (see sketch).

Portland Trails will work on having more of a presence down there. We do have some funding and plans to improve the Stroudwater Trail this year, including this location. We hope to make it feel more like a public space/trailhead than a forgotten dead-end. But regardless, I continue to think moving the vehicle access point will be the most effective at reducing this behavior.

:Let us know how we can help.

Thanks,

Please check out this issue on Portland's SeeClickFix page. (Link below) I report this on a regular basis because I'm the trail steward for the Portland Trails section from Hutchins Drive to Blueberry Road as well as another trail. Every time I go (at least once a week) I encounter the problem of single men parked in cars (running cars if it's cold outside) at the end of Hutchins Drive. They're either there for sex or drugs, not to walk the trail! This situation is so hugely inappropriate for a Portland Trails trailhead! I've seen them in the woods, seemingly going/coming in "separate" directions. I've had them avoid me by walking off-trail through the underbrush so they wouldn't have to come close to me.

It's intimidating for a single person, especially a woman (I have my dog with me so I'm not so intimidated) walking the trail alone. It's not a desirable situation at a trailhead where families want to take their kids to walk a trail! On top of that, they throw trash and cigarette butts out of their cars and make a mess of the area. I report the "loitering men in cars" and the trash on a regular basis to SeeClickFix. Via the site and by phone I've asked PPD to monitor the site several times a day. It's still a problem, and has been going on for years. A patrol car cruising the road and ticketing/removing the men sitting in their cars might help. An unmarked car(s) with a non-uniformed officer, could sit there and observe the problem, then issue tickets or tell the men to leave. "No Loitering" signs are posted there.

I know that Portland Trails is working with some arm of the City of Portland to address the situation, which I realize is a difficult one to address, but I want to be sure that City Council is aware of the situation.

A picture of the trash is attached as well as on the issue report site. You'll be a much better view of the mess that's being made if you look at the attached picture.
