Dear Educator:

A short while ago, I emailed you about a new online professional development course that, as a participant in ARI's Free Books to Teachers program, I thought you would find particularly exciting: Finding the Entrepreneurial Spirit Through Literature!

I'm writing again to let you know that registration is open for the January and February sessions.

As a reminder, this is a joint effort of the Ayn Rand Institute and the Enterprise Through Literature program of the University of Maryland's Ed Snider Center for Enterprise and Markets. I had the privilege of working with other experts and a group of (super-enthusiastic!) high school teachers on the development of this course—and as an insider, I can say that this is definitely worth checking out!

The course draws on examples from Ayn Rand's works and is designed for high school teachers who want to learn more about the principles that shape the entrepreneurial spirit and introduce those principles to students in the classroom.

LEARN MORE

Whether you're teaching Ayn Rand's Anthem or Atlas Shrugged, or other classroom favorites like The Great Gatsby, Brave New World, Fahrenheit 451, Catch 22, or 1984, this course will help you develop quality, cross-disciplinary units of instruction that foster the entrepreneurial spirit and explore its philosophical underpinnings. You will even walk away with a curriculum that you have designed in collaboration with the course's instructors and other participants!

We're currently offering a $50 discount when you register by December 20. Plus, as an ARI teacher you will receive an additional $25 off with the discount code ARITEACHER. There are a limited number of scholarships available.

This is a fully accredited continuing education course, so you'll receive three credits from the University of Maryland's Office of Extended Studies upon completion.

To learn more, read testimonials from teachers who have completed the course, and receive your $75 discount, simply visit enterpriselit.org.

Sincerely,

Aaron Smith, Ph.D.
