BUFFALO, N.Y. (WIVB) - Top secret personal information was found scattered to the wind. That's right; it happened again. Paperwork containing private financial information was found in the street.

It's hard enough protecting personal information, but when it's out on the street, for anyone to see, it's impossible. Well, let's just say two young women were very surprised when we showed up at their door. These papers littering the sidewalk on Main Street in Buffalo have Danielle Cretacci pretty upset.

Cretacci said, "That's careless right there."

Roneika Knox was shocked when we showed her.

"Yes, I'm very surprised. I would never think that I would get a call about this," said Knox.

We tracked down both women using the information on these papers. We even had their cell phone numbers. The papers belong to this Rent-A-Center store on Grant Street in Buffalo. So what are they doing on the sidewalk here on Main Street?

The manager said, "Wow, that's not good."

We showed the paperwork to this man who identified himself as the store manager. He told News 4 that one explanation could be that the papers fell out of a delivery truck.

"There's a store on Main Street and Utica. It could be possible that the guys went there, had paperwork in the
