

PASTOR AARON MACKLEY DIES

Aaron M. Mackley, 83, a Washington native who began preaching as a child and who retired in 1993 after 55 years as pastor of Mount Olive Baptist Church in Arlington, died April 4 at Alexandria Hospital. He had renal failure.

The Rev. Mackley began delivering sermons at age 9 in Baltimore, Washington and along the East Coast. He was a graduate of Northern University in New Jersey and Storer College. In 1947, he received a master's degree in theology from Washington Theological Seminary.

During the early 1930s, he preached at Laurel Grove Baptist Church in Franconia and later spent several years at Antioch Baptist Church in King George County, Va. He began pastoring at Mount Olive Baptist Church in 1938 and remained there until his retirement. He published "Good Religion," a book of radio sermons, in 1947.

He served on the executive board of the Lott Carey Baptist Foreign Mission Convention in Washington and on the board of the Arlington Council of Churches. He helped organize the Interracial Commission of Arlington and taught homiletics at the Washington Baptist Seminary.

His marriage to Mamie Brown ended in divorce.

Survivors include his wife of 46 years, Adele T. Mackley of Alexandria; two children from his first marriage, Alverna M. Miller of Washington and Aronita M. Brown of Arlington; two children from his second marriage, A. Lamont Mackley of Shaker Heights, Ohio, and Monica S. McGriff of Clinton; and six grandchildren. ALAN N. HALL CIA Official

Alan N. Hall, 74, who had been active in area historical projects since retiring in 1978 after 30 years with the Central Intelligence Agency, died of cancer March 31 at his home in Bethesda.

Mr. Hall, a former case officer, joined the CIA's Foreign Broadcast Information Service in 1948. He served in Cyprus from 1949 to 1951 and in Greece from 1953 to 1963. He served in Saigon in what was then South Vietnam from 1967 to 1969 and was awarded the agency's Certificate of Distinction for his work during the 1968 Tet Offensive. He was stationed in the Washington area when he retired.

After that, he did research on the history of Hoover Field, Washington's early commercial airport near the Pentagon. (National Airport opened in the early 1940s.) He also participated in symposiums at the Smithsonian Institution's Air & Space Museum.

Mr. Hall was born in New Jersey and grew up Pennsylvania. A 1947 graduate of Swarthmore College, he did graduate work in history at Columbia University under Jacques Barzun.

During World War II, he was an officer in the Army Air Forces in the Mediterranean theater. He flew 25 bombing missions over southern Europe with the Fifteenth Air Force.

Survivors include his wife, Nina, whom he married in 1947 and who lives in Bethesda; three sons, Philip, of Rockville, David, of Atlanta, and Keith, of Woodbine, Md.; a brother, Robert, of Washington; and a grandson.
JACK B. NEWMAN Musician

Jack B. Newman, 83, a drummer who played with Washington area orchestras for more than 50 years and who retired in 1977 as a personnel director for the social security administration in Baltimore, died of congestive heart failure March 26 at the Washington Hospital Center. An area resident since 1941, he lived in Silver Spring.

Mr. Newman, a native of Evansville, Ind., became a traveling performer with radio's Keith Orpheum Vaudeville Circuit as a teenager. Later, he led a dance orchestra in Evansville for what became ABC radio and in the mid-1930s became a Weather Bureau meteorologist there.

After moving to Washington, he joined the personnel department of the Veterans Administration. He served in the Army Air Forces reserve during World War II and continued his musical career as a drummer for the Meyer Davis Society Orchestra. Later, he became a drummer for the Army & Navy Town Club Orchestra and continued performing until 1993.

After the war, he attended George Washington University and in 1950, became director of the personnel department at the Smithsonian Institution. He remained in personnel for number of federal agencies until retiring from the Social Security Administration. Later, he became a contract hearing examiner.

Mr. Newman was a member of the Society for Professionals in Dispute Resolution, the Industrial Relations Research Association and the D.C. Federation of Musicians.

Survivors include his wife of 61 years, Crystal Newman of Silver Spring; a daughter Jill Newman of Silver Spring; and a granddaughter. A son, Stuart Newman, died in 1977. TALMAGE LYNNE BROCK Real Estate Agent

Talmage Lynne Brock, 47, a real estate agent with Coldwell Banker in Arlington, died of colon cancer April 4 at the Hospice of Northern Virginia. She had lived in the Washington area for more than 20 years.

Ms. Brock, a native of Newport News, Va., attended the University of Richmond. After moving to the Washington area in 1975, she became a real estate agent for the family-owned Howard Brock Co. Later, she joined Long & Foster, where she remained for 17 years before joining Coldwell Banker in the mid-1990s.

Her marriage to Stanley Brock Sr. ended in divorce.

Survivors include two children, Talmage Holland "Holley" Brock and Stanley "Bret" Brock Jr., both of Arlington; her mother, Mildred Jarvis Holland of Newport News and Richmond; and three sisters.
