

The New York Times<https://www.nytimes.com/2007/08/20/us/20engressia.html>

Joybubbles, 58, Peter Pan of Phone Hackers, Dies

By Douglas Martin

Aug. 20, 2007

Joybubbles (the legal name of the former Joe Engressia since 1991), a blind genius with perfect pitch who accidentally found he could make free phone calls by whistling tones and went on to play a pivotal role in the 1970s subculture of “phone phreaks,” died on Aug. 8 in Minneapolis.

Subscribe to The Times to read (and print) as bears to prove it. The cause of death has not been determined, said Steven Gibb, a friend and the executor of the Joybubbles estate.

Subscribe to The Times to read as many articles as you like.
nytimes.com/subscription

The New York Times<https://www.nytimes.com/2007/08/20/us/20engressia.html>

Joybubbles, 58, Peter Pan of Phone Hackers, Dies

By Douglas Martin

Aug. 20, 2007

Joybubbles (the legal name of the former Joe Engressia since 1991), a blind genius with perfect pitch who accidentally found he could make free phone calls by whistling tones and went on to play a pivotal role in the 1970s subculture of “phone phreaks,” died on Aug. 8 in Minneapolis.

He was 58, though he had chosen in 1988 to remain 5 forever, and had the toys and teddy bears to prove it. The cause of death has not been determined, said Steven Gibb, a friend and the executor of the Joybubbles estate.

Subscribe to The Times to read as many articles as you like.

nytimes.com/subscription