Published by Matthew Poppell · June 30 ·

In case you haven't heard, effective July 1, 2022 the new Florida law regarding loud music goes into effect.

Vehicles with music audible more than 25 ft. can now be pulled over and the driver cited by law enforcement.

We want the public to be aware of this change and to get the word out.

Thank you everyone and be safe!

This is past time and I hope you write about a million tickets on this which will lead to warrant persons, dope, and so on. Happy hunting!

Jamie Pleasant why, if they do, they'll just be refunding the money back after this new law is found unconstitutional, just like the original one was back in 2013.

Thank you! I don't understand how anybody can handle noise (it quit being music) that loud and not destroy their hearing ability. But, then again, maybe they are deaf.

So it takes a law to tell people not to be obnoxious to others? Sad. How do these people get along with others at work? When they do enforce it as they should I hope they ask for back up. These people that travel around with the music so loud that I do... See more Hilarious! I can hear motorcycles playing their tunes while inside our church. I can hear my 61 year old husband's music while coming down the lane. I can hear my daughter's music from her room in my living room. Measure 25' and you'll be surprised at all you really hear!

I'm so thankful for this! Cars go by my house and the windows and other things rattle! If I can hear the words INside, it's waaay too loud. These kids and probably adults, are going to deaf!

I live just 2-3 blocks from the police station.

it's literally their own vehicle and people should be able to do as they please in their vehicle (since they are paying for this said vehicle) as long as they're safe. If people would learn to stay to themselves and mind their business!!
