An alternative from the NASN list is the lorgnette or mardi gras mask style occluder which is half the price or less than the glasses. Here is the link for this item on the goodlite website where it is listed at $15. This is not an endorsement, just providing an alternative option from the literature.

Subject: RE: PSSNL meeting notes 2-3-17

I spent time this morning reading "Navigating the path of children's vision screening: Visual acuity, instruments & occluders." This is posted on the NASN website as a tool/resource for vision & eye health. Our district has always used a piece of paper about 2" x 3". Cheap and effective...or so I thought. Apparently paper is not recommended because kids can peek around it. I am not sure if we can/will change this practice simply due to the cost of actual occluders. I looked at the little glasses which are very expensive for a large district, not to mention one would have to clean the frames after each use or parents will complain. Sigh.

Subject: RE: PSSNL meeting notes 2-3-17

Quick question in regards to vision screening. What is everyone using for occluders? In the past we have used “Freddy the fish”, but am wondering if the paper occluders are no longer sufficient? My concern is the cleanliness of needing to share occluders as we are already pressed for time and cleaning them in between each student will add additional time. Any thoughts are greatly appreciated!

Thanks!

Subject: PSSNL meeting notes 2-3-17

Good morning,

Please see attached notes from our meeting last Friday. Please let me know if you find any omissions or errors.

I am also attaching some vision resources, including Colorado Guidelines for School Vision Screening Programs and the vision screening tools chart I mentioned from the NASN website. Note that the Guidelines don't include near vision screening. The NASN page has a wealth of resources and articles <http://www.nasn.org/ToolsResources/VisionandEyeHealth>

Again, not a lot of near screening info. I am guessing this is because, as the Colorado guidelines state: “distance vision screening is the gold standard”. Sigh...

I am planning to do more research on near screening and best practices that I will share as soon as I can.

The following is an excerpt from the Colorado guide:

child will be at the required distance from the chart.

- G. Have the student place their heels on the line or other floor marking. Do not allow the student to lean forward. Monitor for squinting as this may indicate a referral is needed.
- H. If student is seated, the back legs of the chair should be placed on the line.
- I. Occlude the left eye with an adhesive eye patch (using a card or disposable cup are
