Bullshit. You skew (or just outright lie about) everything.

I didn't push. The quellbree wasn't helping, it made him fall asleep 2-3 times a day, and he was constantly irritable. All of that has resolved.

And I didn't send the meds (was still on quellbree as well) because he asked if he could skip them for a day.

You complained and pushed to have the medication changed. It's why he came without his medication on the 18th. You knew I would say something, but now it's been 17 days that he's on vyvanse and it's not fair to keep switching his medication around.

Must be Sabal.

The doctor changed his medication. This one seems to work the best so far. Starts wearing off around 2-3, but he doesn't get angry. His behavior has been great for the past couple of weeks.

You changed his medication and you didn't talk with me about it. 12th verse same as the first.
