Generally speaking I do believe the majority of your schools employees have Wilders best interest at heart, but there are certainly things that raise reasonable doubts as to that.

In looking through ClassDojo, I came across this picture from 10/2020.

"Mrs. Matos wishes he wouldn't cry today."

What I see is a child going through an extremely difficult period in their life and one of your employees making light of as much in front of that child's peers. I don't know if this is a isolated incident, but the fact that it's posted on ClassDojo doesn't bring comfort that it is.

I wasn't privy to the incident detailed below. It was only after my son had a "meeting" with Sabal employees Ashley Tubbs and Matthew Wilson present and he disclosed as much. His version of events was different than what his mother recounted to me.

Yes. December 2020. He threw a water bottle at her and it hit her desk. She threw it back and missed him. He told the principal, she called DCF and me. No DCF report was taken. She received reprimands and whatever from the school. They pulled him out of her class that day and put him in Ms Tridnivka's class. She was amazingly patient and good with him. He stayed in her class through first grade, and Mrs Matos transferred to a different school at the end of the year.

Per his mother, no report from DCF was taken. My sons name is Wilder Thomas Locke. His school is Sabal Elementary. The school is located at 1401 Wickham Road. Melbourne, FL 32935. His teacher at the time was Susan Furtado Matos. The principal of the school is named Paige Trosset. His mother's name is Paige Ann Locke.
